WHY:

Currently, America is concerned about containing the spread of, and finding a cure for, the dreaded Coronavirus (COVID19). And rightfully so. At the same time, however, we believe it is also vitally important to encourage our communities to utilize digital technology and social media to stay engaged and participate in the 2020 Decennial Census—by being counted online, by phone or via mail.

Minority and marginalized communities, including African Americans, Black immigrants, LGBTQ+, children and the elderly, have been historically undercounted in past census counts. This historical undercount has led to millions of federal dollars diverted away from hundreds of programs that support Black America. Being counted is imperative. Says Melanie Campbell, President/CEO of the National Coalition on Black Civic Participation and National Convener of the Black Women's Roundtable, "These are indeed trying times for our nation, as we endure the uncertainty of the COVID-19 global pandemic. It is times like these that stress even more that each and every person needs to be counted so that we receive the resources and assistance that are due for our communities. For that reason, we all MUST participate in the 2020 Decennial Census. Despite the challenges each of us are personally facing, participating in the census has been made much easier for us through the use of social media and digital technology. We must take the time and make sure we are counted and say 'Count Me Black!'"

Each day, utilizing social media, the NCBCP Unity Diaspora Coalition and our partners will focus on encouraging "undercounted" groups to be counted online, by phone or mail including:

- Monday, March 23rd For the Love of our Children: Count Black Kids Day-Encouraging Black families to count their children, especially those historically undercounted---children ages 0-5
- Tuesday, March 24th My Brother's Keeper: Count Black Men Day
- Wednesday, March 25th Sister Power: Count Black Women and Families Day
- Thursday, March 26th Country of Origin Matters: Count Black Immigrants Day
- Friday, March 27th The Power Is in Your Hands and Celebrating Our Diversity: Count Black Youth & Count LGBTQ+ Day
- Saturday, March 28th -The Wisdom of Our Elders and Our Work Matters: Count Seniors and Count Black Workers Day
- Sunday, March 29th Faith in Action: Black Census Count Sunday
